FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 3, 1881.

The platform adopted by the Mahone Convention affirms that the work of that party commends itself to the majority of the Virdebase and bring shame and reproach upon the the property of Miss Morson, of Virginia, and judiciary of the State by making judges of "lizard" gamblers and other equally as impreper material, to injure the State's reputation and rain her credit by attempting to stamp her with the brand of repudiation, and to still further dishonor her by making her notorious as the State that sent a man to the Senate who betrayed his party and his section and put that body in the control of the radicals, we say when all this is recollected "outsiders" will be disposed to thick Virginia tax-payers remarka- men, and have demonstrated that they are now State and her people to the most cordial relable people if such work commends itself to in the entire possession of all their mental facul them. It is unnecessary to say that Virginians, whether tex payers or not, hoot at the idea, and are only amized at the efficiency of the mon who have the sulscity to make such a berland, it has made arrangements for shipping statement.

Comparing the vote the Mahonites received at the recent May election with the number of d ligates in attendance upon their State Convention, it would seem that all who cast Mahone ballots on the 26th ult. went to Richmond on the 2d inst., for there were just about as many present at the Convention as, according to the election returns, voted the Mahone tick it yesterday week. The Convention was as pi ba'd in its proposed principles as it was in its actual color, and, to these acquimted with its component parts, afforded as many reasons as there were delegates present why it was held, though they could all be included about the present aspect of policical affairs tounder one head-love of office and hope to ob. tain it through General Mahone's inflance; publicans, their party would less much of its the hungry souls being so blind that they could force as an efficience political organization, and not see that the General's influence is now one that his leaders would therefore attempt to of the many things that were.

The State defines crimes and fixes their penal. ties, and the residents of a city are as amenable to State laws as those of a c.unty. There is plenty of State law regarding the proper ob servance of Sunday.

The Mahonites in their Convention yester day, as was expected, swallowed the General, hat, plaited pants, red socks, low quartered holder, and it is supposed that the entire sum, shoes and all; took him in whole, and endorsed which was drawn by a printer, went to pay for not only his attacks upon his own State and section, but his bargain with the radicals, by which he put them in possersion of the Senate, and his vote for W. E. Chandler, Having done that it was entirely unnecessary for them to waste time in the selection of candidates for office. They should have proceeded at once to nominate the most ultra and the blackes; radicals in the State as their candidates for the State offices. As they endorsed and approved his radicalism, they should have declared them selves radicals and neminated a radical ticker, in order to avoid the charge of self stultification.

As time passes at Albany it becomes more and more apparent that if the democrats do not gain two Senators from that State they will, at less', secure one Senator, who will be of more real service to them than any two of their own
